A Bridegroom Changes His Mind. Howard County, Mo., is now on sying howard County, Mo., 18 now enjoying a sensation which is a little out of the ordinary routine, and which the Advertier dwells upon at length. A young, but very respectable and poor widow, from Moberly, whose name is not given, during a visit to the vicinity of Wilkerson's Mills, in Boonslick Township, met a young man who paid her his devoirs, and in due course of time they became engaged. On Friday the minister was sent for to make them man and wife, and of course he responded, and found everything ready for the nuptials. Several of the neighbors assembled to witness the ceremony, and at last everything was announced in readiness. The couple stepped upon the floor in the presence of the guests- and minister, and the cere mony was commenced, but before he had mony was commenced, but before he had proceeded tar, the young man ab uptly broke loose from the hand of the young lady and took a seat, remarking as he did so "that is enough." Of course the spectators were all amazed, and the young lady left standing on the floor almost paralyzed at the treatment, which was no doubt the facklest event of her whole life, should she live a thousand years. years.

AMUSEMENTS.

Grand Opera-house. Miss Rose Eytinge commenced her engagement last night in her new play of Katherine; or, the Mystery of Bracken Hollow," a clever dramatization of Miss Fleming's novel, "A Wonderful Woman." The plot, which made the book so popular, is rendered faithfully in the play, and gives most faithfully in the play, and gives the public an additional opportunity of judging of Miss Eytinge as an acress. When here last she appeared in the single character of "Rose Michol," and as warmly as she was re-ceived fer performance of the parts of "Katharine" and "Helea" last night still further convinced the public of her great ability as an actress. The plot of the play has already been given, but

Mrs. Henrietta Chanfrau, in Mr. C. W. Tayleure's drama "Parted," which proved such a success in New York, Boston and other Eastern cities, commenced an engagement for one week only at this house last night. Mrs. Chanfrau is supported by a good company, and the play goes smoothly and is a very enter-taining comedy of the modern school. The plot we have already published, and it is only necessary to say that Mrs. Chanfrau's acting was worthy of the highest praise. She never fails to delight, and "Parted" seems to especial ty suit her. As "Grace Shirley" she is seen at her best, which of so excellent an actress is saying a great deal.
